

CATALYST NETWORKS

Power Through Partnership

Join a dynamic consortium for districts ready to tackle urgent challenges and bold long-term goals...together. Through a shared-services model, members access Education Elements' high-quality, tailored support at a fraction of the cost while learning alongside peers. With data tools, collaborative workshops, and action planning, districts move from insight to implementation faster, smarter and locally focused.

❖ The Challenge

Every district has something they're solving for, whether it's improving instruction, retaining staff, or strengthening leadership pipelines. But limited resources, funding, and capacity often make meaningful progress hard to start. Even the most committed teams can feel stuck, knowing what needs to change but lacking the time, space, or support to make it happen.

❖ The Catalyst

- Practical tools and plans for solving district-specific challenges
- Access to expert facilitation and peer learning
- Action Plans that can be implemented right away that solve pesky problems
- A network of forward-thinking district leaders
- A cost-effective way to test new strategies and solutions before investing further

Coming Together to Solve Persistent Issues

Districts will be grouped based on their identified areas of need, ensuring each cohort focuses on a shared problem of practice. This regionally-based structure allows for deeper collaboration, targeted support, pooled-resources, and the exchange of relevant strategies and solutions. Each cohort will include three to five districts, creating an intimate learning network where leaders can learn from one another's experiences and test ideas before implementing. Districts are also encouraged to recruit fellow leaders or neighboring districts to join, strengthening local collaboration and collective impact.

Data Informed Action - The EE Data Triangle

Administration of the Data Triangle surveys provides districts with transparent, side-by-side comparisons that help communities clearly understand current conditions and uncover opportunities. This approach creates structures for dialogue and trust, ensuring community voices are not only heard but also translated into actionable, credible, and future-focused recommendations. By grounding the consortium's work in both evidence and lived experience, the process helps uncover root causes, clarify shared goals and priorities, and lay the foundation for collaboration and targeted action.

◆ Affordability when you can't afford to wait.

This consortium offers an affordable entry point for districts ready to make progress but mindful of limited resources and capacity. It's ideal for teams who want to test an idea before fully investing, ensuring efforts are strategic and sustainable. In a time when funds are tight and energy is stretched, this shared-services model provides access to expert support, collaborative learning, and actionable solutions without overextending people or budgets.
